I am delighted once again to commend the comprehensive Directory for the United Dioceses of Dublin and Glendalough and, as always, my thanks go to the Reverend Nigel Waugh for his careful compilation. In a fast-moving world, it is extremely useful to have a readily accessible compendium of information about individuals and institutions who form the work and the weave of these Dioceses.

Many people over the years have come to rely on this publication in order to find their bearings. It also serves to show us the many ways in which we cope confidently with change of personnel and roles within the fabric of Dublin and Glendalough. Clarity of content combine with clarity of presentation to make the information it contains easily accessible to all.

Once again, I have every confidence that this Directory will be used comprehensively by everyone who has a heart for the work and mission of God as God moves us forward in his service.

+Michael

From the Editor

In an age of internet searches, when everything is available on the web, it may seem strange to be producing a Diocesan Directory in printed form. But we don't always have web access and web pages are not always up to date. And when a busy rector is in his car looking for a phone number or wondering who is the chaplain to a certain hospital or where he might find an organist at short notice, a small printed booklet can be very useful.

As always, we are grateful to the advertisers who make it possible to produce this booklet and distribute it free of charge to the parishes of the United Diocese. It is available to the clergy, to all the key personnel and to any parishioner in the Diocese who requests a copy. I would ask readers to look carefully at the pages of advertisements when they are selecting services or goods for their parish.

Once again, the schools under Protestant management have supported the Directory and we are particularly grateful to them at a time of financial stringency. I am sure clergy will remember this as we are asked to give advice on secondary schooling to our parishioners.

Each new year brings with it a number of changes and we have made every attempt to make the information as accurate and up to date as possible. For any inaccuracies I apologise. I usually have a small number of phonecalls after publication telling me of changes that the parish had meant to tell me about before publication.

Parish and personal entries have been compiled from information supplied by the clergy themselves and by those involved with various aspects of the life of the church.

I am most grateful to the Archbishop for his kind foreword and indeed for his warm support for this and for the Church Review through the year, to Uta Raab for the section on lay training, to David McConnell for the details of church organists and deputy organists, to Sylvia Heggie and Jennifer Byrne in the Diocesan Office and Lucy Connolly, Archbishop's Secretary, for their help.

Retired clergy and clergy widows have been included once again. Their contact details are particularly appreciated by many. It is important not to forget those, now in retirement, who have given a lifetime of service to their church.

DCG Publications, who also print the Church Review, and Peter McGuinness, the chief copy setter, work hard on our behalf and I send them my personal thanks.

Nigel Waugh
